Money Urgently Needed!

Their lot was never an easy one, even under favorable conditions. They had to struggle along through sheer hard work and hand-to-mouth pinching and scraping. Then came the blow. The husband was stricken down with tuberculosis. The wife was left with four little ones to keep. But she faced the future bravely, buoyed up by the hope that some day her husband will come back. In the meantime, she has to go out washing and cleaning every day, and then force her tired-out body to do her own work at nights.

Cases of this kind are numerous. They always call for prompt relief. For unless consumption is quickly treated its terrible effects hurt many beyond the first victim. At this moment money is urgently needed so that medicine, nourishment, and treatment may be taken to sufferers. We implore you to contribute something NOW. Please don't delay; the situation is serious.

Contributions to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives will be gratefully acknowledged by W. J. Gage, Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Avenue, or R. Dunbar, Secretary - Treasurer, 347 King Street West, Toronto.

THE HISTORICAL MEETING.

Friday night at the regular meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society the audience gathered to a lecture, not by a professor, clergyman or orator, but by a Librarian. Dr. H. Locke, Chief Librarian of the Toronto Public Library, gave a delightful address on the subject "A Librarian's Hobby." The lecture was not one to the ordinary individual but a well-versed audience greeted the speaker. Locke believes that everyone should have a hobby. In his introductory remarks he used very many illustrations to prove his point, naming the names of several well-known Toronto citizens and telling of their hobbies. He described the hobby stages which the young pass through as a collector of stamps, coins and other treasures and advised the audience to encourage the boy in these things which means so much to the child that everyone is better for having a hobby is one of his strong points.

In his own hobby, he said, ranging from the love of books, to the love of the love of the author, Kipling, and by many of his chosen selections from Kipling's works he showed how much he had taken out of an author by the time who would study his works with real love for them.

Locke has a very happy way of telling himself. He has the fine knowledge when to sandwich the serious with the serious and make combination most delightful for the audience while he drives home in a manner some truth—and is one that many of us, unless to do not care to meet face-to-face. The lecture was one that will be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be present.

Following the meeting the President of the Society announced that the next meeting of the society would be on Friday evening, May 15th. After the business meeting that the president will give a paper on "more photographs in the 's' collections" which will be illustrated by a series of lantern slides. Meeting closed with "God save King."

EXTREMES IN DAYLIGHT.

There is, in Reality, No One Longest or Shortest Day.

It is usual to regard Dec. 21 as being the shortest day in the year and June 21 as the longest. But this impression, like so many others that are ingrained in the popular mind, is not a strictly accurate one.

True it is, of course, that on Dec. 21 and June 21 respectively the sun reaches its most southerly and most northerly points in the zodiac and begins in the one case to ascend and in the other case to decline. But this is in theory only, because for two or three days preceding and following these dates there is no observable difference in its position or its hours of rising and setting.

This question of latitude, by the way, is extremely important when speaking of the shortest or longest day or days of the year.

In London and its neighborhood, for instance, the shortest days are seven hours and forty-five minutes and the three or four "longest days" around June 21 are sixteen hours and twenty-six minutes. At Tornea, in Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours long and Christmas one less than three hours in length. In St. Petersburg the longest day is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours, while at Spitzbergen the longest day is three and a half months, the shortest being counted in seconds only.—London Answers.

FEATHERED SCAVENGERS.

Crows as Track Cleaners and Gulls as Government Workers.

As unique a crew of track cleaners and police as could be found anywhere is enlisted in the service of the Southern Pacific railroad. The members are neither Americans nor foreigners. It is a crew of crows.

The big black birds built their nests near Hornbrook, Ore., on the northern division of the road. They have become fat and sleek living off the generosity of tourists and of dining car employees.

When the trains arrive at Hornbrook the crows leave their roosting places and circle about the depot. As the limiteds pull out the birds follow them for five or six miles. Scraps are thrown to them, and they devour every bit, policing the tracks and acting as scavengers. The section hands and other employees of the road realize the value of these birds and keep them from being molested. Trains crossing the Great Salt Lake are followed by sea gulls, the latter, like the crows, feasting on scraps thrown from the diners.

In a similar way the great lakes are patrolled by white winged gulls. The government protects them, appreciating the work they do in following the ships or hovering over the fishing

MILLINERY

We are opening to-day a choice lot of New Millinery suitable for spring and summer.

The artistic note is strongly pronounced in most of the hats and there are very few, if any, shapes which are too extreme to be generally becoming and to appeal to the taste of the most discriminating wearer.

The use of Taffeta and Moire in both piece goods and ribbon has certainly been revived to greater honors than ever before, they are shown in all colors.

The underbrim trimming is a new feature of Flowers, Osprey, Smart Feather Mounts, Stick-Ups and Wing Trimmings, all being considered very good.

We would also draw your attention to our Children's Hats.

Lovely New Blouses in sizes from 34 to 42. Come and see them.

SAVED BY HIS WIT.

One Warrior Who Was Too Much for Frederick the Great.

Frederick the Great was very fond of hearing what the common soldiers thought of him and often frequented in disguise the taverns where his soldiers caroused. One day he went into a tavern and sat down at a table with an old soldier. The latter insisted on paying for everything, and the king noticed that the fellow had money, although it was not pay day.

"How is it, comrade," said the king, "that you can make your money last so long?"

"That's easy enough if you know the Prussian dodge," was the answer —sell or pawn everything that you don't need. To-day, for instance, I sold my sword and made myself a wooden one; that's good enough in times of peace," and the soldier drew his sword and showed the king
a wooden one.

A few days later the king was reviewing his troops, and he recognized his old acquaintance with the wooden sword. He immediately dismounted, walked up to the man and said to him, "Draw your sword and cut off my head!"

"Your majesty," said the trembling soldier, "how can I commit such a crime?"

"Your first duty is obedience to your king!" shouted Frederick with an angry voice. "Draw your sword!"

Then the old fellow lifted his eyes to heaven and with a trembling voice exclaimed: "I obey! But may heaven change my steel sword into a wooden one when I draw it to strike my king." Thereupon he drew his sword, and it was a wooden
one. With a hearty laugh the king mounted and rode on.

The Rest Was Easy.

Mrs. Gordon had recently moved into the neighborhood.

"I thought I would come and tell you that your James has been fighting with my Edward," said one of the neighbors one morning as she called at Mrs.
Gordon's door, "and settle the matter
if I could."

"Well, for my part," responded Mrs.
Gordon haughtily, "I have no time to enter into any discussion about the children's quarrels. I consider myself above such trifling things."

"I'm delighted to hear it," was the reply. "I'll send James over on a stretcher in an hour or two."—Life.

Mediation Proposals Give Aspect to Mexican Situation

Washington Is Officially Advised

Huerta Has Accepted the
of the Three Latin Republic Negotiate For Peace—Na War Departments Are Still Completing Plans.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Tenseness of the Mexican situation was distinctly relieved yesterday the representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, supported by sure from all Latin-America and the foremost powers of Europe concentrated their efforts toward adjustment of the crisis.

The success of the first stage toward mediation—the prompt acceptance by the United States of an announcement of the Spanish ambassador that Huerta had accepted tender of good offices—producing a feeling of distinct hope, which reflected not only in Administration quarters, but in Congress where "war talk" gave way to one of conciliation.

Throughout the day the South American envoys, who undertaken the task of mediation held frequent conferences to discuss the preliminaries of procedure. The receipt of the formal acceptance by Huerta no proposal will be sent to either the United States or Huerta Government. Also it has made plain that no conditions either party as to the terms that be accepted has as yet been placed before the intermediaries.

The President and Secretary were assured through two separate diplomatic sources that General Huerta was ready to accept the tender of good offices and was now drafting formal acceptance. Pressure Germany, Great Britain and the United States are advising Huerta to accept the steps toward mediation, and the prevailing attitude of Latin-American countries to the settlement of the controversy by Pan-Americanism, emphasized the world influences which are working to about peace and avert a conflict of death and bloodshed.

Meanwhile the Navy and War departments are continuing their efforts to care for refugees and perfect the machinery of the army and navy for any unexpected turn in events.

Secretary Daniels announced he had telegraphed the full text of the mediation offer and its acceptance by the United States to both Admirals Badger and Howard instructions to have the command of all ships on the east and west coasts spread the news throughout Mexico. By this Mr. Daniels hopes feeling toward Americans may be alleviated and refugees enabled part without molestation.

Advices received through the British Embassy told of the completion of arrangements for the safe departure of Americans from Mexico while the French Ambassador to the State Department a message had received from the French minister stating that while there has been some anti-American manifestations in the Mexican capital, order prevailed.

TO PROTECT BRITONS.

British Fleet May Be Increased In Mexican Waters.

LONDON, April 28.—The British Government has had under consideration the possible necessity of strengthening the British fleet in Mexican waters, in order to insure the protection of British subjects and property. Nothing has been yet definitely decided and in view of the latest news from Mexico it is hoped by officials that it will be unnecessary to send more war vessels there.

According to information received by the Government the danger which threatened British subjects in Mexico has largely passed, but any recurrence of that danger will probably be met by the despatch of a sufficient naval force to protect British subjects and their property.

MACREADY IN CHARGE

Soldier Is Created Magistrate In Belfast District.

No Troops Have Been Moved Into the Unionist Zone Although Certain Regiments Have Been Warned to Stand Ready—Police Ordered to Arrest All Armed Motorist In Vicinity of Belfast.

LONDON, April 28.—The nature of the steps which Premier Asquith announced in Parliament the Government intended to take in Ulster is not yet known, except that Major-Gen.
C. F. N. Macready of the adjutant general's staff of the War Department, has taken over the command of the police forces in the Belfast district.

No troops have yet been moved north from Dublin although it is understood that certain regiments have been warned to hold themselves in readiness. Five warships arrived off Larne, 17 miles from Belfast, Sunday, and last night played searchlights on the town.

The second Cabinet meeting within 24 hours will take place this morning. The Government have already begun to set the force of law at work and the police in outlying Ulster districts are already reinforced and instructed to search all automobiles and arrest the occupants if any are carrying arms. The budget statement has been postponed till Monday.

The following amendment to yesterday's vote of censure on the Government has been tabulated by several Liberal members. "In view of the serious nature of the preparations made by the Privy Councillors, members of Parliament and others in Ulster, supported by leaders of the Unionist party, to resist the administration of law, resulting in unprovoked outrages on persons and property, including obstruction of the highways, interruption of telephone and telegraphic services, holding up
the police, customs house officers, and coast guardsmen, in the execution of their duty, this House undertakes to support the Government in whatever measures are necessary to vindicate the authority of law, to protect the officers and servants of the King in the execution of their duty and secure to his Majesty's subjects
the enjoyment of their legal rights."

Yesterday's actual and reliable information from Belfast is that three battalions of infantry are expected today. Gen. Macready, the new military governor, has arrived, and will issue an important proclamation, the nature of which is not yet known. It is expected that all arms landed have now been stored. The work was finished at three o'clock yesterday morning, a further supply having been brought in Sunday night.

Hamilton Pyfe, wiring to The Mail
from Belfast, concludes: "Of course, everyone is saying, 'What will the Government do?' and in the flat moments which follow the unusual exhilaration a few are asking themselves whether, after all, Ulster's strength did not lie in sitting still.
But that is only the mood of a few.
The general feeling is one of exultation."

"A leading member of the Unionist organization expressed himself thus,
when someone suggested that English opinion might be inclined to jibe at Ulstermen openly breaking the law.

STRIKE RIOTS WORSE.

Governor of Colorado Admits Helplessness In the Crisis.

DENVER, Colo., April 28.—The strike situation yesterday passed all previous bounds. Actual rebellion spread, not only through all of the southern strike zone, but in the northern coal fields, where a quiet strike has been in progress for three years. The strikers late yesterday demanded that every gun in the possession of the mine guards be withdrawn from the field immediately.

In the opinion of those on both sides who are in close touch with the situation, only the possibility that President Wilson might decide to send Federal troops out to take charge of the situation will prevent more serious complications than have existed.

Governor Ammons admitted late yesterday that he is powerless to suppress the warfare. This admission followed a day of wild rumors, some groundless, other authentic, in regard to happenings at Chandler, Ludlow and Trinidad in the southern coal fields and at Louisville in the northern part of the state.

The state capitol from 8 o'clock yesterday morning until late in the day was thronged with men and women, some of them representatives of the coal companies, but a great majority of persons who went there to plead with the governor to use his utmost power to halt the bloodshed

BRIANDISTS GAIN.

Ex-Premier's Party Slightly Favored By the French Electors.

PARIS, April 28.—Although 351 Deputies were definitely chosen in yesterday's general election for the French Chamber of Deputies, the country will have to await the result of the 251 second ballots on May 10 before it can tell whether the present Government will obtain a majority.

The known results do not indicate any remarkable change in the composition of the parties, but from the votes cast it would appear that the combination of groups led by former Premier Aristide Briand and Louis Barthou, known as the federation of Democrats of the left, was more favored by the voters than the groups forming the present Government's majority.

This may undergo a change at the second ballot, and it may be necessary to take a test vote in the Chamber itself before it can be known with certainty whether the Government will stand or not, as the 602 Deputies are divided into thirteen groups.

IT NEEDS RE-PROBING.

New Irregularities Are Discovered In the Marine Department.

QUEBEC, April 28.—Once again Quebec is the scene of a graft scandal. This time it is the Marine Department, which was thought to have been investigated to the bottom in 1908, that is to be the subject of investigation. The padding of pay lists for eight years with names of those who were not working for the Department at the time they figured on the rolls, and also with the names of persons who had no existence whatsoever, constitutes the irregularities now alleged.

Mr. Doutre, of Ottawa, the purchasing agent of the Department, has arrived at Quebec and it is expected that a commissioner will be appointed to-day to conduct an investigation.

It is said the irregularities, which cover a period dating from 1906 up to within a few months ago, were brought to light through the fact that one of the men in the Department turned informer. His charges were so serious that the Department sent down a detective to enquire into their veracity with the above result.

Mr. Doutre gave out a statement last night in which he said that a commission would in all likelihood be appointed to-day, and that the Government was determined to take most prompt and drastic action to stamp out all wrongdoing as an effective deterrent for the future. He said that, contrary to the general impression, no one had been dismissed or even suspended. He further stated that there was not the least indication that there had been the slightest irregularity with regard to the purchase of supplies, the sole issue being the padding of payrolls, while the sums obtained from these alleged irregularities had been apparently devoted to expenditures on work or material unauthorized by the Department.

THE ISSUE IS DEFINED.

WILL IT BE A TARIFF FOR THE PEOPLE, OR THE PEOPLE FOR THE TARIFF?

"The tariff exists for the people and not the people for the tariff."

That was the declaration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in summing up the tariff policy of the Liberal party after two weeks' debate in the Commons on the main issue now before the Canadian people. Amplifying that declaration and putting in concrete form the first step of fiscal emancipation from the toll of combines and monopolies, was the Liberal resolution providing for free wheat, free wheat products, free agricultural implements and tariff revision with a view to reducing the high cost of living and relieving both consumers and producers from unnecessary and unprofitable customs taxation, while at the same time doing injustice to no existing industry.

The Liberal resolution, proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier was voted down by the Government majority. Although reactionary Toryism, at the behest of self-seeking and sectional interests, voted down the resolution the issue is still to be decided by the Canadian people. The lines of cleavage on the most important issue of the day have been defined.

Sir Wilfrid in summing up the issue between the classes as opposed to the masses of the Canadian people embraced in the Liberal resolution a general statement of fiscal policy true to the fundamental principles of Liberalism, broad-based on sound economics and in accord with the world movement toward freedom of trade, equality of opportunity in buying and selling both for consumers and producers alike, and the removal of the toll which combines and monopolies, under the special privileges of Protection, take of the common people. As a first step, Liberalism proposes the wiping out of tariff restrictions and tariff taxation on wheat, on flour and on the instruments of agricultural production. That meets the primary requirements their way to the polls to decide the issue."

Will it be a tariff for revenue only, lower taxation and agricultural prosperity; or will it be more profits for the vested interests, a continual increase in the cost of living, a periodical recurrence of times of depression and unemployment, with urban congestion and pauperization and a concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, as has been in the case in the United States and in every other country where high protection has flourished? The decision will rest with the common people whose battle Liberalism seeks to fight.

THE CASE OF FREE FLOUR.

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER PROMPTLY DROPS THE ARGUMENT WHEN CAUGHT WITH MISLEADING FIGURES.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. George E. Foster, unwittingly emphasized in the Commons last Thursday the main argument of Liberalism for free flour. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had quoted figures in the House showing that the millers of Canada were selling flour in the home market at the present time for from $5.30 to $5.40 per barrel. They were selling the same flour in London for $4.70 per barrel. Mr. Foster, in seeking to combat this argument, quoted figures, from which was apparently an official document, to show that the price in London was from $6.33 to $6.81 per barrel. Perhaps Mr. Foster did not intend to mislead the House intentionally but when challenged by the Liberals as to his basis of comparison he had finally to admit that he had been comparing the English price per sack of 280 pounds with the Canadian price per barrel of 196 pounds. When the reluctant correction was made, that even on Mr. Foster's figures Canadian flour, which sold in Toronto for $5.30 per barrel, was sold in London for $4.80 per barrel. Mr. Foster did not pursue further the argument that the millers must have Protection and that it would be ruinous to the Canadian milling industry to give free trade in wheat and wheat products.

THE IMPLEMENT DUTIES.

THE REDUCTIONS PROPOSED BY THE LIBERALS IN THE RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT—WHAT THE "BIG INTERESTS GOVERNMENT" HAS DONE.

In his budget speech Hon. W. T. White announced a reduction of five per cent. in the duty on one class of

They have condemned this policy with which there would necessarily go provision for the establishment of great Canadian shipyards both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The launching of the world's largest lake freighter from a Canadian yard throws into bold relief the "Little Canadianism" of those who deny Canadian ability in ship-building. The figures which show the quantity of material used in the construction of this vessel and the number of wage-earners to whom employment was given suggest the great benefit to Canadian industries and Canadian artisans which would flow from the adoption of the Liberal policy under which the construction of cruisers and like vessels would be actively taken up in the Dominion. Under Mr. Borden's policy of "contribution" however, Canadian money for naval purposes would not be spent in Canada but for materials and wages in another part of the Empire.

HON. MR. WHITE AND THE FARMERS.

A Finance Minister Who Has Nothing For the Men of Canada's Greatest Industry but Much for the Special Interests.

In the fiscal year 1912-13 the value of the manufactured goods exported from Canada amounted to $43,692,708. In the first eleven months of 1913-14 the value of similar exports was $51,204,162.

In 1912-13 the value of the products exported by the farmers of Canada was $150,145,661 and in the first eleven months of the following year the value of farm exports was $191,707,483.

Out of 1,300,000 wage earners in the Dominion 389,873 are employed in manufacturing and mechanical establishments. Of the remainder 716,937 are employed in agricultural pursuits.

In other words, the value of agricultural exports was more than three times as much as the value of the manufactured goods exported and nearly twice as many wage-earners are employed on the farm as in industrial plants.

Notwithstanding these facts the Borden Government in its tariff legislation, as in all things else, gives place of first importance to the wishes of the manufacturers and disregards the claims and wishes of the farmers.

The Dominion Council of Agriculture and other farm bodies throughout Canada urged the abolition of the duties on wheat and flour in order that Canadian wheat might have free entry to the American market and the Canadian millers be forced by competition to reduce the high prices which they charge the Canadian consumer for their flour. Farmers throughout the Dominion pressed for the total abolition of the unnecessary duties on farm implements. Many farmers and farm organizations protested against increased tariff protection being granted the steel and iron industries.

When Hon. W. T. White announced the tariff programme of the Government a few days ago he refused the farmers' request for free wheat and made it plain that the refusal was due to the objections of the Canadian millers and the Canadian railways. He refused the request for duty-free agricultural implements and offered instead a five per cent. reduction in duty on three machines only, a concession which will be of negligible benefit to the farmer. He ignored the farmers' protests against more tariff favors for the steel and iron interests and announced a higher scale of duties upon steel and iron products in accordance and producers alike, and the removal of the toll which combines and monopolies, under the special privileges of Protection, take of the common people. As a first step, Liberalism proposes the wiping out of tariff restrictions and tariff taxation on wheat, on flour and on the instruments of agricultural production. That meets the primary requirements of the basic industry of agriculture as voiced by the demands of its representatives both from Western and Eastern Canada and as presented to the Government in memorial after memorial. That is the starting point. If the agricultural industry is prosperous, the manufacturing industries, the railway companies and the other interests about which the Government is so solitious will also prosper. Agricultural development has languished because its rewards have gone to the combines and the monopolies which flourish under restricted competition, fostered by Protection. The cost of living has gone up because the consumer has been compelled to pay tribute to the canners' combine and the host of other combines which furnish the millionaires of protectionist countries. The restriction of production and the enhancement in price of the fruits of production have caught labor between the upper and the nether millstones. The cone has rested on its apex instead of on its base. That is the condition of affairs which Liberalism seeks to remedy. That, in broad outline, is the motif of the Liberal fiscal proposals.

The lines of cleavage have been drawn. The issue is defined. Sound economics and the traditions of Liberalism the world over are behind the resolution moved by Sir Wilfrid. The economic conditions of Canada to-day demand action. As Mr. Boivin, the youngest Liberal in the House, put the issue:

"The Canadian spirit is with us. We do not doubt the result. The manufacturer in Eastern Canada who prefers a large output and reasonable profits to temporary high profits and a restricted output; the farmer who wants a larger market for his wheat and cheaper agricultural implements with which to ply his calling more successfully; the railway men who are anxious to transport the thousands of incoming settlers to the lands of the West; the laborer who seeks steady employment, a living wage, and something more than dried bananas and desiccated coconut—now on the free list—in his dinner pail will all wend

THE IMPLEMENT DUTIES. THE REDUCTIONS PROPOSED BY THE LIBERALS IN THE RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT—WHAT THE "BIG INTERESTS GOVERNMENT" HAS DONE.

In his budget speech Hon. W. T. White announced a reduction of five per cent. in the duty on one class of farm implements—harvesters, reapers and mowers. Immediately the shout went up from Conservative speakers and Conservative newspapers: "Here is a government and a Minister showing true friendship to the farmers. They conveniently ignored the fact that the Government and the same Minister had, at the same time, given such increased protection to certain interests as will add much to the weight of the tariff taxation upon the farmers and laborers and the other citizens of Canada as 'consumers.' They shouted of the Government's zeal for the interests of the farmers and pointed to how much more Borden had done to assist the agriculturalists than Laurier.

But the facts of the case are worth examining.

During their years of power the Liberals made reduction in the duties on implements. In 1911 they proposed, by the Reciprocity Agreement, to reduce those duties further.

By that agreement the Liberals proposed to reduce by five per cent. the duties on fifteen classes of implements and to reduce by two and a half per cent. the duties on two other classes. The latter included harvesters, etc., and farm wagons; the former, ploughs, tooth and disc harrows, drills, potato diggers, hay tedders, horse rakes, threshing machines, fodder and feed cutters, fanning mills, etc.

Mr. Borden and his friends were successful in defeating the Reciprocity Agreement which otherwise would have been in operation since 1911. Consequently, the duties on the seventeen classes of implements which were covered by that pact have continued in force, and the farmers have lost in consequence. Now, nearly three years later, the Borden Ministry cuts by five per cent. the duties on one of the seventeen. Yet Conservative politicians and papers try to fool the farmer into the belief that the Government has done great things for him.

A TRIUMPH OF SHIP-BUILDING. WORLD'S LARGEST LAKE FREIGHTER BUILT BY CANADIANS—AN ANSWER TO BORDEN'S "CANADA CAN'T PARTY."

The largest lake freighter in the world was launched at Port Arthur on April 14th, six months after the keel was laid. Between the time of keel-laying and the date of launching upwards of 5,000 tons of steel were used in the vessel's construction and employment was given to four hundred men. In length the freighter would overlap a dreadnought by two hundred feet.

Canadian workmen, using as far as possible, Canadian material, have built the world's giant freighter. Directly, the building of the vessel has given employment to four hundred men; indirectly, it provided work for many hundreds more who were engaged in the production of the steel and other materials entering into the construction of such a ship.

Yet Premier Borden and his associates and supporters have ridiculed the suggestion that Canada could undertake the construction of naval ships. These advocates of the "Canada Can't" idea have laughed at the Liberal belief that it would be possible for the Dominion to build cruisers and other similar vessels. They have denounced the Liberal policy of building in Canada, as far as possible, out of Canadian material by Canadian labor.

and the Canadian railways. He refused the request for duty-free agricultural implements and offered instead a five per cent. reduction in duty on three machines only, a concession which will be of negligible benefit to the farmer. He ignored the farmers' protests against more tariff favors for the steel and iron interests and announced a higher scale of duties upon steel and iron products in accordance with the demands of the corporations. In a word, the Government was quick to do the will of the corporations and special interests but it was deaf to the wishes of the farmers who employ twice as many men as the manufacturers and export products to three times the value of the Canadian manufacturers sold in foreign countries.

Like Mr. W. H. Rowley, the former president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Hon. Mr. White and the other members of the Borden Ministry evidently believe that "the farmers have got too much already."

NO CORRUPTION ON THE N. T. R. Professor Skelton, of Queen's University, Deals with the Construction of the Railway and the Gutelius-Staunton Party Pamphlet.

In an article in the April issue of The Queen's Quarterly, Mr. O. D. Skelton, professor of economics at Queen's University, makes pertinent comment upon the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway and the criticisms upon the manner in which the work was undertaken and carried through. He supplies the answer of an impartial observer to the reckless partisan charges which have been made through the Gutelius-Staunton report and in other ways by the present Ottawa Ministry and its friends against the Liberals in connection with the building of the Transcontinental. "The (Liberal) Government", writes Professor Skelton, "appears at the outset to have set up barriers against the expected designs of the grafter." After specifying these barriers erected to protect the public interest, Prof. Skelton touches upon the criticisms which have been levelled against the methods of handling tenders and supervising contract work. As for the criticism that contracts were not sufficiently subdivided to permit small contractors to tender he says that it is "a criticism apparently weak in face of the size of the plant and magnitude of the organization needed in the remote wilderness."

Dealing with the charges of over classification and other improper measurement Professor Skelton writes: "So far, however, as may be gathered from study of the voluminous evidence upon these points, there were no differences among the engineering staff other than honest differences of opinion, opinion as to interpretation of clauses or as to what was actually feasible, and the total amounts involved make up no large share in cost over the original estimates."

"It is encouraging in the midst of so much talk of corruption in Canada", he adds, "that repeated investigation has revealed no instance of corruption on the part either of the management or the staff, whatever errors of judgment may be charged."

Amper's Great Mind Had No For Merely Royal Affairs

Amper, the famous mathematician and physicist, was one of the most minded men that ever lived. The following story from the Times Rundschau goes far to prove:

In September, 1906, Amper learned paper on his researches at the Academy of Sciences in Paris. When he had finished his lecture was about to take his seat he found to his surprise, that it was occupied by a man who was greatly agitated, he went to G. Saint-Hilaire, the president of the academy, and said, "Mr. President, call your attention to the fact that some one who is not a member of this body has entered the chamber and taken my seat."

The president replied calmly he was mistaken, my learned brother person whom you have in mind ourselves, a fellow of the Académie des Sciences."

"How long, I should like to know," said Amper.

"Since Nivose of the year VI the president, who was now entering into the humor of the situation."

"And in what class?" inquired suspicious Amper.

"In the class of mechanical engineering, my friend," answered Saint-Hilaire, laughing.

"Well, that is odd!" cried Amper, and, seizing a calendar of the academy, he opened to the date Saint-Hilaire mentioned and read: "Napoleon Bonaparte, fellow of the Académie des Sciences, chosen in Nivose of the year VI."

Much disturbed, Amper made no more apologies and explained he had not recognized the emperor's account of his poor eyesight.

"You see what happens," said Amper, "when you don't get to meet your fellow members. I never seen you at the Tuilleries now I shall command you to come see me. Tomorrow at 7 o'clock you dine with me."

The next evening the emperor dined two hours for Amper, but long since forgotten the invitation.

STRONG MINDED

A Third, Ordinary
Person Proved a Dark Horse

By F. A. MITCHEL

How Edgar Marston met and wooed Julia Spingler does not pertain to this story. It is sufficient to say that he won her consent to their marriage when she was passing out of her teens and her ideas of the stand she should take in the world were in embryo. Soon after her engagement Julia fell under the influence of Margaret Halsted, an elderly unmarried lady—to avoid the unpleasant term old maid—who wrought a considerable change in her.

monplace man, the other with a brilliant lawyer with whom she might in time be a partner not only matrimonially, but professionally. It must be confessed that this second picture was very attractive. Julia saw herself and her husband working together on interesting cases, each assisting the other with suggestions and oftentimes supplying each other's deficiencies.

It was this that finally determined Julia to break with Edgar Marston and, accept Cyrus Underwood. Relying on a certain sense of justice she had observed in the former, she laid the case before him, telling him that she saw in a union with Underwood a brilliant future for herself, and, though it pained her to pain Edgar, she thought that in justice to herself she should make the change. But on no account would she do so unless Edgar assured her that he thought her perfectly right in the matter.

If Marston had a fault it was not in opposing persons whose minds were made up. He said that her problem was altogether too deep for him to solve, but if it was better for her to marry a lawyer it was certainly better for himself that she should do so, inasmuch as he was not a lawyer, but a plain man of business. Nothing would be well for either that was not well for both.

Julia, whose mind at the time was fixed upon the brain union that promised such brilliant results, was much pleased with her lover's statement of the case, not so much on account of its good sense as because it left her free to enter upon a new alliance that appeared so advantageous. A few weeks later she wrote a very kind letter to Edgar, regretfully breaking her engagement with him, and not long afterward her engagement with Underwood was announced.

By this time Julia had been admitted to the bar. The first problem that came up for her to solve after becoming a lawyer was whether she should better practice awhile independently of her fiancé or form the expected partnership with him at once. Underwood urged her to be married and enter his office as his assistant for one year, with the partnership in view. This she rejected as incompatible with her ideas of equality between the sexes. She demanded a partnership, and Underwood yielded.

Singularly enough, before consummating the arrangement she wished to ask her former lover what he thought about it. Why she should wish for the opinion of a man she had discarded because he was not intellectual enough for her does not appear. She could probably not have explained the matter herself. It had been agreed between her and Edgar that they should remain friends. She did not, therefore, hesitate to ask him whether she would better remain for awhile independent or enter upon a partnership at once.

Edgar looked at her stupidly for awhile before replying. She was about to turn away from him disappointed when he said:

"Before trying yourself professionally with any lawyer meet him in court as his opponent."

There was something far down at the bottom of this advice that appealed to her, though she could not exactly explain what it was, since she didn't exactly see how such a situation could be brought about. Edgar, who was connected with a corporation having considerable business, could have opponent further antagonized her by apparently paying no attention to her. When she had finished Mr. Underwood in cross examination destroyed every point she had made, proved her witnesses perjurers and turned all her efforts to ridicule. His summing up was rather an attack on corporations than a statement of his side of the case. The jury acquitted his client without leaving their seats.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

"Come, dear," said the defendant's counsel after all was over and they were gathering lawbooks and putting them in green bags; "let's go to lunch."

To his surprise, Miss Spingler swept out of the courtroom without replying to his invitation or otherwise noticing him. Then for the first time it occurred to him that a woman might not be constructed to stand the browbeating he had been accustomed to visit on his male opponents. He looked after her with a troubled expression and wondered how he could have been so stupid. He must call in the evening and undo the damage he had done.

But before leaving his office that afternoon he received a note from his fiancée stating that, whereas she had considered him a jurist and found him a pettifogger, she felt constrained to break her engagement.

SHORT ON MEMORY.

e's Great Mind Had No Room For Merely Royal Affairs.

ere, the famous mathematician, physicist, was one of the most abiding men that ever lived, as following story from the Taegliche shows goes far to prove:

September, 1806, Ampere read a paper on his researches before the Academy of Sciences in Paris. He had finished his lecture and out to take his seat he found, to his surprise, that it was occupied by a man he knew. He was agitated, he went to Geoffrey Saint-Hilaire, the president of the Academy, and said, "Mr. President, I call your attention to the fact that one who is not a member of the Academy has entered the chamber and taken my seat."

The president replied calmly, "You mistaken, my learned brother; the man whom you have in mind is, like me, a fellow of the Academy of Sciences."

"How long, I should like to ask?" Ampere asked.

"Nivose of the year VI," said the president, who was now entering the humor of the situation.

"In what class?" inquired the president.

"The class of mechanical engineering," answered Saint-Hilaire, laughing.

"That is odd!" cried Ampere, looking at a calendar of the academy, and then to the date Saint-Hilaire had named and read: "Napoleon Bonaparte, fellow of the Academy of Sciences, chosen in Nivose of the year VI."

disturbed. Ampere made all his apologies and explained that he did not recognize the emperor on account of his poor eyesight.

"See what happens," said Napoleon. "When you don't get round to your fellow members, I have seen you at the Tuilleries. But shall I command you to come and see me tomorrow at 7 o'clock you will find me."

Next evening the emperor waited for Ampere, but he had been forgotten the invitation.

Visible Molecules.

In the year 1913 recorded the first photograph of a molecule. The matter is composed of molecules, made up of atoms in crystalline forms. Using X rays through a crystal diffraction photograph resulted in the so called space lattice of atoms and giving conclusive proof of Dalton's atomic theory.—New York Times.

when she was passing out of her teens and her ideas of the stand she should take in the world were in embryo. Soon after her engagement Julia fell under the influence of Margaret Halsted, an elderly unmarried lady—to avoid the unpleasant term old maid—who wrought a considerable change in her.

Miss Halsted was what was called a strong minded woman till the more pleasing term "new woman" was invented. Under the tutelage of the stronger, or at least the more developed, intellect Julia conceived a different notion from what she had held of the part of women in the universe. That it was a woman's part alone to bear children she did not believe. Under the new dispensation the professions were open to the gentler sex, and she saw no more reason why a woman should not enter them than a man. After consultation with her mentor she resolved to become a lawyer.

Marston was not considered bright, but was universally respected. Some of Julia's intimate friends who looked upon her as a talented girl wondered how she could fancy one who was intellectually her inferior. He regretted that she had entered a field which has been occupied almost exclusively by men, for he was not up to the new departure. He had looked forward to having a wife who would rely on him to provide the home and on herself to run it smoothly. Being one of those persons who believe in the adage "All things come to those who wait," he took no action upon his fiancée's becoming a lawyer, leaving the matter of his relationship with her to work itself out.

Julia consulted Miss Halsted with reference to her engagement with Marston, but did not act on her advice, which was to remain single. The fable of the fox who had lost its tail suggested itself to the pupil, and she saw no reason why because a woman adopted a profession she should give up wifehood and motherhood, so she continued her engagement.

But while pursuing her studies Julia listened to a course of lectures from an eminent member of the bar, by whom she was very much impressed. It seemed after hearing the keen logic of Cyrus Underwood that Edgar's talk was extremely commonplace. Mr. Underwood, who was a bachelor in middle age, took a great fancy to Julia and, not being aware of her engagement, showed her attention.

Julia, who realized that she was bound in honor to Marston and was extremely fond of him, now entered upon one of those periods of indecision that are extremely trying. But whatever there was in him was not glittering and did not appear to advantage beside the brilliant mind of Underwood. In her perplexity Julia made a confidant of Margaret Halsted.

Perhaps if she wished for advice she would have done better to go to a married woman who had had experience in such matters. But even this would not have been likely to avail anything, for Julia was pretty likely to make up her own mind about what she would do in her own affairs without the advice of any one. However, Miss Halsted gave her a couple of pictures, the one of a union with a com-

with a lawyer meet him in court as his opponent."

There was something far down at the bottom of this advice that appealed to her, though she could not exactly explain what it was, since she didn't exactly see how such a situation could be brought about. Edgar, who was connected with a corporation having considerable law business, said he would watch for an opportunity. It was not long after this that his company proceeded by law against a man for a debt. The defendant's counsel being Mr. Underwood, Edgar Marston secured the appointment of his former fiancée as counsel for the company.

Mr. Underwood was a lawyer—not a jurist, but a practical court lawyer—from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. Miss Spingler opened the case by stating the company's claim against the defendant, showing conclusively wherein he had acted with intent to defraud and how he had laid himself criminally liable. She had studied the law in the case carefully and made an excellent presentment of both the law and the case. There was no doubt but that the defendant would be worsted unless his counsel could either throw dust in the eyes of the jury or work upon its sympathies.

When he arose to speak he referred admiringly—somewhat patronizingly, Julia thought—to his "young opponent," as he called her, and to the ingenuity she had displayed in making the law appear to be on the side of the company, while he was prepared to show that it was all on the side of his client. He would also show that the facts in the case favored the defendant. As he warmed up he began to whirl both the law and the facts over the heads of the jury, at the same time appealing to the prejudices of the twelve men in what he called an octopus corporation sucking the blood out of an innocent man whom it had purposely ruined for the sake of sucking the little business he possessed into its capacious maw.

Miss Spingler, who had considered Mr. Underwood to be full of the dignity of the law, was appalled at what she considered an attack on plain justice. Mr. Underwood, who had won success by such handling of his cases and had fought his male opponents with far more deft weapons, breaking a bottle of wine with them after the trial, was oblivious to the fact that his opposing counsel considered his statements untrue, that he knew they were untrue and, moreover, that he was personally attacking her from the opening to the close of his speech.

The next matter that occupied the court was the examination of witnesses. Miss Spingler's indignation at the treatment she had received was so great that she could barely settle herself to the work of drawing out the facts. While she was doing so her and wondered how he could have been so stupid. He must call in the evening and undo the damage he had done.

But before leaving his office that afternoon he received a note from his fiancée stating that, whereas she had considered him a jurist and found him a pettifogger, she felt constrained to break her engagement.

The subsequent career for a year of Miss Spingler was one of indecision. What other women may be fitted for, she was not adapted by nature for a lawyer. She gradually fell back into a reliance on plain matter of fact Edgar Marston. It never occurred to her that in the only advice he had given her he had hoped to show her the true situation in her own individual case. She finally married him, and after the birth of her first child, instead of concerning herself with the meshes of the law, she gave herself up to the best treatment of babies during the tooth cutting period.

USE DOGS AS BLANKETS.

How French Knife Grinders Keep Warm While at Work.

Every visitor to one of the great Paris stores will have noticed counters covered with table cutlery of the characteristic French pattern—broad, curved blades and horn or black bone handles, excellent steel and very cheap. Almost all this is made at Thiers and by hand. But there is no external sign of manufacture, and a traveler might pass through the town without suspecting a great industry.

The swift flowing Durole supplies power at the bottom of a deep and narrow gorge, on the steep side of which the apparently sleepy town is built. At one story below street level we came to the forges of the chief firm. Here, with extraordinary quickness and skill the knives are hand forged—blade, hilt and tang—from steel bar, then tempered one by one, and two stories lower down, at river level, in a long, dark, damp cellar, they are ground, and it is the method of this process, unique so far as I know, that makes the industry of Thiers worth a moment's description.

The river turns a score of emery wheels about a yard in diameter, and above each of these is a narrow, sloping platform six feet long and two wide. Along each of these, flat and face downward, lay a grinder, man or woman, grasping a blade by the two ends and pressing it by the whole weight of the body against the revolving wheel just below. The long row of stretched out bodies gave a grim impression of something between a field hospital and a mortuary.

The foreman assured us that it was much easier work thus to press against the wheel by one's weight than to sit and press by the force of one's arms. But to lie thus almost motionless all day long in a dank cellar, far below the ground level, is about as dreary and unhealthy a way for a human being to pass his life as can be imagined. The place itself cannot be warmed, but to keep at least a little heat in their bodies and stave off rheumatism as long as possible the grinders have adopted the extraordinary expedient of training dogs to lie all day upon them—dogs of all sorts and sizes. There they lay, curled up on the backs of their owners' thighs, living hot bottles.—Sir Henry Norman in Scribner's.

POWDERY SCAB OF POTATOES.

Some time ago it was found that there existed in the eastern provinces of Canada, viz., Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, a disease of the potato tuber, known as corky or better powdery scab, which had probably been present at least in some localities, for a number of years, but not distinguished from the disease known as common scab.

While this disease, under Canadian conditions, has so far only in one instance given indications of being more destructive than common scab, it is nevertheless a very undesirable malady to have permanently established in potato growing land. As a result of the discovery of powdery scab, the United States authorities, through fear of introducing the disease, have enacted that potatoes shall not enter the United States except under rigorous system of certification, which includes a certificate to the effect that the potatoes were raised in an area in which neither potato canker nor powdery scab exists. If the export with the United States is to be regained in face of the existing regulation the methods directed towards the eradication of the disease must be followed intelligently and in a thorough spirit of co-operation.

In order to familiarize the farmers of Canada with this disease, Mr. J. W. Eastham, Chief Assistant Botanist of the Central Experimental Farm, has prepared a comprehensive circular

Why did License Inspector visit the Counties of Huron, P Welland and work against the Temperance Act? Why did Government reprimand this for interfering in this election on account of the Government of Snider because he knew too

These and other questions were asked by C. H. Bowman, Chief Whip, in moving his resolution to appoint a select Committee House to investigate Snider's action in opposition to the Canada Temperance Act and the relations Government and the liquor in to Snider's visits.

The questions in their essence remain unanswered, for the Government refused to grant a commission to allow an investigation. As pointed out at the time, the Government is continuing its policy for last year in the Proudfoot case the policy blocking the enquiry.

Mr. Rowell showed that the Government official, in the Temperance Act contests was actually working on the same side organized liquor interests against forces of the Churches, the De Alliance, the Ontario Young Men Association and other Temperance bodies. In doing this was he carried out the wishes of the Government.

Hon. W. J. Hanna denied the Government on the part of the Government except in so far as they recognize difficulties of enforcing the Temperance Act, but neither his colleagues were willing to have the affair investigated. The question was what the Government could do.

In order to familiarize the farmers of Canada with this disease, Mr. J. W. Eastham, Chief Assistant Botanist of the Central Experimental Farm, has prepared a comprehensive circular entitled, Powder Scab of Potatoes, which is Farmers' Circular, No. 5 of the Division of Botany and is available to all who make application for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The nature, symptoms and preventive methods are fully outlined and the following summary of recommendations for control of powdery scab are given:—

1. Use only "seed" from a crop free from the disease.
2. Disinfect such "seed" to destroy any stray disease germs.
3. Use land known to be free from the disease. In most areas this will have to land not previously planted to potatoes.
4. Do not plant potatoes again in land which has shown the disease. If possible seed such land down to grass.
5. Isolate the crop from any field showing the disease, and take all possible precautions to avoid the spores from this crop scattered where they infect other potatoes.
6. Pay special attention to the cleaning, and, if necessary, disinfection of implements which may carry the disease.

MOTHERS!

An anxious, grief-stricken mother appealed to us recently. She wrote:

Suppose that your son or your daughter were a consumptive. Suppose that he or she were pale and wasted and shaken by a hacking, strength-sapping cough. Suppose that you hadn't the money to provide the badly-needed medicine, nourishment, and skilled medical treatment. Think what a blessed relief it would be to you to know that the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives stands ready to help!

Vigorous protests were made by Mr. Rowell and the Liberal against what they call the jer of the proposed redistribution most intolerable unfairness claim, comes in the changes County of Bruce, which now three Liberal members. Under proposed redistribution most Liberals will be hived in one seat known as West Bruce with a majority on the basis of the last election, of 1027. In other Bruce seats, under the scheme, there are Conservative ities, one of 7, the other of 10. This means that one of the members, William McDor Centre Bruce, is practically eliminated and J. G. Anderson member for South Bruce, of having a Liberal majority with, will have a Conservative ity of 7 to fight against.

Other changes, obviously for cal reasons, are also projected Greys where North and South will be strengthened for the Co tives by transferring to them vative townships from centre a safe Conservative constituency re-arrangement of the Victoria Government evidently have a seat, which they danger of losing. Instead ridings in the Niagara Peninsula will be five with Monck, a constituency abolished. Of two show Liberal majority Essex there will be three seats of two, one of these a Liberal. Strong objection is being to the retention in Toronto of the B arrangement of seats.

NO TEMPERANCE ADVANCE

Even the Liberals themselves surprised at the slight change Liquor License Act brought by Hon. W. J. Hanna. WHO CONSTITUTE ABRAHAM'S SEED?

Abraham's Seed Appointed to Roll Away the Curse of Death.

Abraham's Seed Twofold—The Spiritual Seed—How the Logos Became the Messiah—Purpose of Jesus' Death and Resurrection—The Spiritual Seed a Company—Natural Seed of Abraham.

PASTOR RUSSELL

April 26.—Pastor Russell, whose PHOTO-DRAMA OF CREATION is awakening much interest in Bible topics, preached to-day a very instructive discourse from the text, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the Promise." — Galatians 3:29.

The Pastor first demonstrated from Scripture that mankind are under the curse of death, and that they can come under God's blessing only by the bringing in of a new condition. God's purpose to lift the curse is shown in His Promise to Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The promised Seed will roll away the curse and roll in the blessing of life.

Next the Pastor pointed out the Scriptural evidence that the Logos left Heaven and became a human being, of the Abrahamic stock, in order to become the promised Seed. Jesus according to the flesh could not be the Messiah, the promised Seed; for, although a perfect Man, He could have done nothing more than to guide people into happier conditions. He could not have been the Deliverer whom God had promised.

How Jesus Became the Messiah.

Then the Pastor showed that Jesus became the Messiah when baptized of John in Jordan. There He presented Himself a living sacrifice, to do unreservedly the Father's will. This meant, primarily, our Lord's death as the antitypical Sin-offering. Mankind are under the death sentence pronounced upon Adam; therefore their Redeemer must taste death for mankind before He could ask for their release from that penalty.

Our Lord's ascension was another step in the Divine Plan of salvation. As St. Paul declares, it was necessary for Jesus to appear in the presence of God with the merit of His sacrifice, in order that the Father might give the Church the benefit of the cleansing which our Lord had accomplished. Many have not noticed, he claimed, that the Scriptures limit the work of the Gospel Age to the Church.

The Pastor also showed that after Jesus had become the Spiritual Seed of Abraham through His anointing of the Holy Spirit at Jordan, He began to a limited extent the work of blessing. But after He had ascended on High He was then the Perfected One, so far as He Himself was concerned. The speaker demonstrated, however, that the Scriptures

CHICAGO, April 27.—Beneficial rains thruout most of the winter and spring crop belts had more influence in making the wheat market bearish today than the assumed outlook for peace. The close, which was comparatively steady, showed $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cent decline. Other leading staples, as well as wheat, all finished at a loss—corn $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ c, oats $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ c, and provisions 5c to 25c.

The Development of the Church.

Primarily, the Seed of Abraham,
the Pastor declared, was to be the Spiritual Seed—Christ and the Church on the Divine plane. But Abraham's natural seed—the Jews—
will also have a part in the blessing.
This is set forth, he claimed, in Genesis 22:16-18, where God told Abraham that his seed would be like the stars and the sand on the seashore.

The speaker then explained how some from both Jews and Gentiles have constituted this Spiritual Seed.
The early Church was mainly of Jewish origin. These had found that they could not get everlasting life by keeping the Law. Therefore, as St. Paul declared, they must become dead to it, accept Christ as their Sin-offering and consecrate themselves, in order to become members of the Anointed Body.

The Gentiles were never under the Law Covenant, the Pastor demonstrated, and therefore they came into Christ merely by presenting themselves living sacrifices as did the Jews. All who do so by faith—Jew or Gentile—are begotten of the Holy Spirit to Heavenly hopes and ambitions. Those who continue faithful unto death will receive a place in the glorified Church. Of this Christ company Jesus was the Head, and the faithful in Christ Jesus throughout this Age have been the members.

The Pastor then showed that the experiences of the Jews throughout the Jewish Age had developed a special class, enumerated by St. Paul in Hebrews 11. These Ancient Worthies will receive their promised "better resurrection" in that they will awaken perfect men; whereas the rest of mankind will require centuries to attain human perfection.
This Ancient Worthy class will be associated with the Messianic Kingdom as its earthly phase. The Heavenly phase will be invisible to humanity. The world will see the Ancient Worthies—perfect men, the image and likeness of God in the flesh.

MONTREAL, April 27.—Offerings at the C.P.R. live stock market were 550 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 600 calves.

There was no actual change in the market for cattle as compared with this day week, the feeling being steady because of the fact that the supply was about equal with requirements, but the general impression was that drovers were losing money at the present prices as the quality of the stock offered was much better than it has been of late and must have cost more in the interior. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and as the weather was fine and cool the disposition on the part of the packers and butchers was to operate more freely, and in consequence the demand was better, and a fairly active trade was done. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $8.25; good at $7.75, and medium at $6 to $6.25. Small lots of picked choice steers brought as high as $8.50 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for butchers' cows was stronger and prices advanced 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the fact that the supply was smaller than usual. Sales of picked lots of choice stock were made at $7.25 to $7.50, while the top figure paid for choice bulls was $7.25 per 100 pounds.

SEA SAFETY.

Some of the Things Which

Conference Will Bring About

The signing of the agreement drawn up by the delegates to the International Conference on Safe Sea, at the British Foreign Office, brings into force new rules which will undoubtedly make ocean travel safer and shipping disasters fewer in the future.

Lord Mersey, president of the conference, summarized the principal provisions of the convention. He

"An international service is established by the nations chiefly interested for the purpose of a patrol and ice observations, as well as the destruction of derelicts in the North Atlantic. It is to be under control of the United States.

This service is to take over and continue the work done by the vessels employed by the United States in 1912-13 in locating and determining its limits to the east, and the west, and in coming in touch with it as it moves southward in order that vessels be kept informed by wireless telegraphy of its position.

"The service will also continue ice observation work started last year by Great Britain with the object of determining before the ice becomes a peril the fundamental conditions which govern its movement.

"Great Britain will also continue the duty of dealing with dangerous derelicts east of a line drawn from Cape Sable to latitude 34 North and longitude 70 west. The waters to the west of this line will be watched by the United States.

"The duty is also imposed upon shipmasters to report the presence of dangerous ice and derelicts. A code has been prepared to facilitate this reporting.

"When ice is reported on the track a ship must proceed at night at moderate speed, and its course, so as to clear the zone.

"The practice by which, across the Atlantic are fixed by agreement between the steamship companies has been left unaltered. The Governments undertake to press all shipowners with the ability of following as far as possible these routes.

"The effective lighting of decks is provided for by the convention, and the carrying of Morse code is made compulsory.

"An international code for and important signals has been adopted.

"It was impossible to revise the International collision regulations, many states which were part of these regulations were not represented on the conference, but the convention binds the contracting parties to bring about a revision of regulations.

"Other points affecting the safety of navigation were found important of embodiment in definite action, but the committee submitted recommendations embodying its views."

BEAU FIELDING A PUZZLE.

He Was the Enigma of English Social Life in His Day.

Beau Fielding was a young man of fashion in the reign of William III. His house was sumptuously furnished, his hunters, hawks and racers were of great value, and "he kept a table of princely hospitality." He had no ostensible source of income, yet appeared to be rolling in wealth. All that was known of him was that he was the fifth son of Thomas Wilson, an impoverished gentleman of Leicestershire. Evelyn describes him as a very young man, "civil and good natured, but of no great force of character," and "very sober and of good fame." All attempts to discover his secret were vain. "In his most careless hours of amusement he kept a strict guard over his tongue and left gossip to conjecture what it pleased."

He redeemed his father's estate and portioned off his sisters and when remonstrated with on his extravagance replied that, however long his life should last, he would always have

She Was Careful.

Mistress—Now, Sarah, I want you to be careful about breaking this vase. It cost a great deal of money, and I would hate to have it carelessly broken the first thing.

Mother's Busy Day.

The monologue artist was moving his audience to tears. "Dear old mother," he was saying, "I will never forget how she used to rock all of us children to sleep. There were nineteen of us, and by the time she had us rocked to sleep the alarm clock rang, and she had to get dad's breakfast."

over his tongue and left gossip to conjecture what it pleased."

He redeemed his father's estate and portioned off his sisters and when remonstrated with on his extravagance replied that, however long his life should last, he would always have enough to live in the same way. Some said it was he who had robbed the Holland mail, for which another man had suffered; others that he depended upon the gambling table, though he never played for large sums. He was the enigma of social life till his career was cut short by a duel. His adversary was at that time a young man about town like himself, John Law, who afterward became the founder of the famous Mississippi scheme by which half of France was ruined. When the mysterious Beau died he left only a few pounds behind him and not a scrap of evidence to enlighten public curiosity.

Evasive.

"Would you love me just as much if I were a poor girl?"

"Every bit as much," he said, congratulating himself that she didn't ask him if he would still want to marry her.

tack Human Beings.

Observations made through number of years by officers. United States revenue marine that the polar bear's limit is St. Matthew island in Bering Sea. A few of these bears were at once seen near the seal islands, being upon a huge ice floe. On St. Matthew island the bears have lairs among the rock glens that upon the island. They feed entirely upon seals, walrus, drift whales, and, though disinclined to devour the blubber, they greedily consumed. A carcass which a bear has passed his snout judgment reveals the seal's fatty lining torn asunder, being cut into strips and shreds powerful claws and teeth. A blow of a bear's paw upon a head suffices to kill it, and, cut upon the ice, a meal is soon patched.

In summer the hairy coat of the polar bear turns to a dingy brown and its pelt then becomes of no value. They have not near the courage of the interior bears and will rarely attack a person unless there are three in company. As soon as a man approaches the bear, it will shamle off as fast as it can, and there are but few records of a bear killing any of the native Eskimos.

The Eskimos are very partial to the meat of the white bear, but they reject, and even the dogs refuse to eat, the less they are very hungry, their noses at the oily mass years ago it was a hard matter to cure the entire skin of a polar bear. The Eskimos formerly cut off the head and claws and either threw it into the sea or buried them in the ground. One of their superstitions is that should the head and claws be disposed of the friends of the animal will see the remains and will never return.—Juneau News.

Facts About Deafness.

According to a French statistician males are more subject to deafness than females, and out of seven middle-aged persons the two who do not hear so well will be with the other. In every children under fifteen years of age show symptoms of deafness and 6 per cent. a marked deficiency in hearing power. The tendency to disease increases from the age of forty and then begins usually to decrease as old age advances. Out of the total number of cases subjected to surgical treatment in France in one year it is estimated that about 57 per cent. were cured, 30 per cent. permanent proved.

PASTOR RUSSELL

April 19.—Pastor Russell's discourse to-day was based on the text:
"Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand
of the Lord, and in the hand of thy God." — Isaiah
62:3.

The Pastor introduced his discourse with the statement that the call of the Gospel Age is separate and apart from the salvation provided for the world in the next Age. During the Gospel Age God has been gathering out of the world a class which He declares shall be a royal diadem—
not on His Head, as if an added glory, but in His hand, representative of power. By manifesting what He has done with the Church, Jehovah will show forth His own praises, in that He will reveal features of His character never before exhibited.

The permission of sin, the Pastor maintained, has given opportunity for God to develop His great Plan for the eradication of evil. The Almighty could easily have prevented
Satan from bringing sin into the Universe; but He foresaw the glorious results which He will eventually accomplish through the permission of evil. Therefore He did not interfere when Satan tempted our first parents, but permitted all mankind to be born in an imperfect and sinful condition.

Then the Pastor showed how Adam's disobedience brought death into the world. He next explained how Jesus' death guarantees the cancellation of Adam's penalty, and the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom for the recovery of the race from sin and death. To assist the Redeemer in the great work of human un-lift, he asserted, God purposed to select from amongst mankind a Church class. So a call went forth for those who would separate themselves from the world, take up their cross and follow Jesus.

"Zealous of Good Works."

For nearly nineteen centuries, the Pastor declared, God has been gathering this people from various nations. As the Apostle tells us, these are "a peculiar people, zealous of good works." These good works, the speaker claimed, are not the building of hospitals, asylums, schools, etc., but the same kind of good works in which our Lord engaged at His First Advent. The Scriptures assert that Jesus "went about doing good." In line with this is the Apostle's injunction, "Do good unto all men, especially to the Household of Faith."
The greatest good is to serve them

On the island of Banquet there is a tribe of Dusuns differing widely from other tribes bearing that name. Their marriages are performed in the presence of two families. There is no public gathering. The Scriptures assert that Jesus "went about doing good." In line with this is the Apostle's injunction, "Do good unto all men, especially to the Household of Faith." The greatest good is to serve them with the Glad Tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

Pastor Russell then pointed out the qualifications which constitute the basis of selection. God desires those whose hearts are right. Here the speaker digressed a little to explain that this does not mean that the non-elect are to be thrown to devils and roasted to all eternity. God is not premeditating evil against even those who are His enemies through wicked works, but is merely calling a class to assist the Redeemer in recovering mankind from sin and death conditions.

According to the Scriptures, the Pastor declared, God is not now choosing many rich, learned and noble, to constitute the Church class. The rich have plenty to satisfy their hearts, and therefore do not feel their need. The intellectual rather look down upon the average of humanity as not knowing any better than to believe the story of man's fall and other Bible stories. He deplored the fact that the world in what they think is wisdom ignore God's Word, in which His Plan for man's recovery from degradation, sin and death is closely connected with the fall of man and the redemption effected by Jesus' death on Calvary. Whoever omits this part of the Bible loses the connecting link, and cannot perceive God's Plan for man's salvation.

The Bible says that not many noble are called. The speaker showed that the noble-minded know that they are morally above the average, and therefore have a self-satisfied feeling which prevents their realizing their need of a Saviour.

"Ye Are His Workmanship."

The Pastor next discussed the class whom God has accepted and forgiven through Jesus' blood. As the transforming work of the Holy Spirit goes on in their hearts, they become noble characters. Nobility of heart is what God desires — loyalty to Him, to righteousness, to truth, to the brethren.

The speaker likened the Lord's work in this class to that of the lapidary. As a diamond properly cut will radiate the glories of the sunshine, so God's jewels, when cut and polished, will show forth His praises. In the First Resurrection these jewels will be mounted in the gold of the Divine nature and placed in God's glorious diadem.

PROLOGUE.

An irate British lord and his beautiful but petulant lady; the Hon. Penelope Drake, youngest and most cherished sister of his lordship; Randolph Shaw, a handsome and athletic young American, and a French count are the leading characters in this amusing and highly entertaining romance by McCutcheon, the prince of American story tellers. It captures the interest from the very first paragraph, and there is not a dull line in it from start to finish.

CHAPTER I.

In Which a Young Man Trespasses.

"HE'S just an infernal dude, your lordship, and I'll throw him in the river if he says a word too much."

"He has already said too much, Tompkins, confound him, don't you know."

"Then I'm to throw him in whether he says anything or not, sir?"

"Have you seen him?"

"No, your lordship, but James has. James says he wears a red coat and—"

"Never mind, Tompkins. He has no right to fish on this side of that log. The insufferable ass may own the land on the opposite side, but, confound his impertinence, I own it on this side."

This concluding assertion of the usually placid but now irate Lord Bazelhurst was not quite as momentous as it sounded. As a matter of fact, the title to the land was vested entirely in his young American wife, his sole possession, according to report, being a title much less substantial but a great deal more picturesque than the large, much handled piece of paper down in the safety deposit vault—lying close and crumpled among a million gaudy, homely little slips called coupons.

It requires no great stretch of imagination to understand that Lord Bazelhurst had an undesirable neighbor. That neighbor was young Mr. Shaw—Randolph Shaw, heir to the Randolph fortune. It may be fair to state that Mr. Shaw also considered himself to be possessed of an odious neighbor. In other words, although neither had seen the other, there was a feud between the owners of the two estates that had all the earmarks of an ancient romance.

Lady Bazelhurst was the daughter of a New York millionaire. She was young, beautiful and arrogant. Nature gave her youth and beauty. Marriage

Bazelhurst Villa looks across the valley and sees Shaw's cottage commanding the most beautiful view in the hills; the very eaves of his ladyship's house seem to have wrinkled into a constant scowl of annoyance. Shaw's long, low cottage seems to smile back with tantalizing security, serene in its more lofty altitude. In its more gorgeous raiment of nature. The brooks laugh with the glitter of trout, the trees chuckle with the flight of birds, the hillside frolic in their abundance of game, but the acres are growing like dogs of war. "Love thy neighbor as thyself" is not printed on the boards that line the borders of the two estates. In bold black letters the signboards laconically say: "No trespassing on these grounds. Keep off!"

"Yes, I fancy you'd better put him off the place if he comes down here again to fish, Tompkins," said his lordship, in conclusion. Then he touched whip to his horse and bobbed off through the shady lane in a most painfully upright fashion, his thin legs sticking straight out, his breath coming in agonized little jerks with each succeeding return of his person to the saddle.

"By Jove, Evelyn. It's most annoying about that confounded Shaw chap," he remarked to his wife as he mounted the broad steps leading to the gallery half an hour later, walking with the primness which suggests pain. Lady Bazelhurst looked up from her book, her fine aristocratic young face clouding with ready belligerence.

"What has he done, Cecil dear?"

"Been fishing on our property again, that's all. Tompkins says he laughed at him when he told him to get off. I say, do you know, I think I'll have to adopt rough methods with that chap. Hang it all, what right has he to catch our fish?"

"Oh, how I hate that man!" exclaimed her ladyship petulantly.

"But I've given Thompson final instructions."

"And what are they?"

"To throw him in the river next time."

"Oh, if he only could!" rapturously.

"Could? My dear, Tompkins is an American. He can handle these chaps in their own way. At any rate, I told Tompkins if his nerve failed him at the last minute to come and notify me. I'll attend to this confounded popinjay!"

"Good for you, Cecil!" called out another young woman from the broad hammock in which she had been dawdling with half alert ears through the foregoing conversation. "Spoken like a true Briton. What is this popinjay like?"

"Hullo, sister! Hang it all, what's he like? He's like an ass, that's all. I've never seen him, but if I'm ever called only for bridge and sleep. There was a duke among them and also a French count, besides the bored New Yorkers; they wanted brandy and soda as soon as they got into the house, and they went to bed early because it was so much easier to sleep lying down than sitting up.

All were up by noon the next day, more bored than ever, fondly praying that nothing might happen before bedtime. The duke was making desultory love to Mrs. De Peyton and Mrs. De Peyton was leading him aimlessly toward the shadier and more secluded nooks in the park surrounding the villa. Penelope, fresh and full of the purpose of life, was off alone for a long stroll. By this means she avoided the attentions of the duke, who wanted to marry her; those of the count, who also said he wanted to marry her, but couldn't because his wife would not consent; those of one New Yorker, who liked her because she was English, and the pallid chatter of the women who bored her with their conjugal cynicisms.

"What the deuce is this coming down the road?" queried the duke, returning from the secluded nook at luncheon time.

"Some one has been hurt," exclaimed his companion. Others were looking down the leafy road from the gallery.

"By Jove, it's Penelope, don't you know!" ejaculated the duke, dropping his monocle and blinding his eye as if to rest it for the time being.

"But she's not hurt. She's helping to support one of those men."

"Hey!" shouted his lordship from the gallery as Penelope and two dilapidated male companions abruptly started to cut across the park in the direction of the stables. "What's up?" Penelope waved her hand aimlessly, but did not change her course. Whereupon the entire house party sallied forth in more or less trepidation to intercept the strange party.

"Who are these men?" demanded Lady Bazelhurst as they came up to the fast breathing young Englishwoman.

"Don't bother me, please. We must get him to bed at once. He'll have pneumonia," replied Penelope.

Both men were dripping wet, and the one in the middle limped painfully,

Can't you see the mottoes on No Trespassing?" But Mr. S. "Well, why don't you throw river?" He kinder smiled with it. "I will," says Tompkins a rush for him. I don't just why I started in to help Tom I did. Somehow, sir, Mr. Sh. "Don't call him Mr. Sh. Shaw; he's no gentleman." Lord Bazelhurst.

seen the other, there was a feud between the owners of the two estates that had all the earmarks of an ancient romance.

Lady Bazelhurst was the daughter of a New York millionaire. She was young, beautiful and arrogant. Nature gave her youth and beauty. Marriage gave her the remaining quality. Was she not Lady Bazelhurst? What odds if Lord Bazelhurst happened to be a middle aged, addlebrained ass? So much the better. Bazelhurst castle and the Bazelhurst estates (heavily encumbered before her father came to the rescue) were among the oldest and most coveted in the English market. Her mother noted, with unctuous joy, that the present Lady Bazelhurst in babyhood had extreme difficulty in mastering the eighth letter of the alphabet, certainly a most flattering sign of natal superiority, notwithstanding the fact that her father was plain old John Banks (deceased), formerly of Jersey City, more latterly of Wall street and St. Thomas'.

Bazelhurst was a great catch, but Banks was a good name to conjure with, so he capitulated with a willingness that savored somewhat of suspended animation, so fearful was he that he might do something to disturb the dream before it came true. That was two years ago. With exquisite irony Lady Bazelhurst decided to have a country place in America. Her agents discovered a glorious section of woodland in the Adirondacks teeming with trout streams, game haunts, unparalleled scenery. Her ladyship instructed them to buy without delay. It was just here that young Mr. Shaw came into prominence.

His grandfather had left him a fortune, and he was looking about for ways in which to spend a portion of it. College, travel and society having palled on him, he hid himself into the big hills west of Lake Champlain, searching for beauty, solitude and life as he imagined it should be lived. He found and bought 500 acres of the most beautiful bit of wilderness in the mountains.

The same streams coursed through his hills and dales that ran through those of Lady Bazelhurst, the only distinction being that his portion was the more desirable. When her ladyship's agents came leisurely up to close their deal they discovered that Mr. Shaw had snatched up this choice 500 acres of the original tract intended for their client. At least a thousand acres were left for the young lady, but she was petulant enough to covet all of it.

Overtures were made to Mr. Shaw, but he would not sell. He was preparing to erect a handsome country place, and he did not want to alter his plans. Courteously at first, then somewhat scathingly, he declined to discuss the proposition with her agents. After two months of pressure of the most tiresome persistency he lost his temper and sent a message to his inquisitors that suddenly terminated all negotiations. Afterward when he learned that their client was a lady he wrote a conditional note of apology, but if he expected a response he was disappointed. A year went by, and now with the beginning of this narrative two newly completed country homes glowered at each other from separate hillsides, one envious and spiteful, the other defiant and a bit satirical.

stamming in which she had been dealing with half alert ears through the foregoing conversation. "Spoken like a true Briton. What is this popinjay like?"

"Hullo, sister! Hang it all, what's he like? He's like an ass, that's all. I've never seen him, but if I'm ever called upon to—but you don't care to listen to details. You remember the big log that lies out in the river up at the bend? Well, it marks the property line. One half of its stump belongs to the Shaw man, the other half to me—to us, Evelyn. He shan't fish below that log—no, sir!" His lordship glared fiercely through his monocle in the direction of the faraway log, his watery blue eyes blinking as malevolently as possible, his long, aristocratic nose wrinkling at its base in fine disdain. His five feet four of stature quivered with illy subdued emotion, but whether it was rage or the sudden recollection of the dog trot through the woods it is beyond me to suggest.

"But suppose our fish venture into his waters, Cecil. What then? Isn't that trespass?" demanded the Hon. Penelope Drake, youngest and most cherished sister of his lordship.

"Now, don't be silly, Pen," cried her sister-in-law. "Of course we can't regulate the fish."

"But I dare say his fish will come below the log, so what's the odds?" said his lordship quickly. "A trout's a lawless brute at best."

"Is he big?" asked the Hon. Penelope lazily.

"They vary, my dear girl."

"I mean Mr. Shaw."

"Oh, I thought you meant the—but I don't know. What difference does that make? Big or little, he has to stay off my grounds." Was it a look of pride that his tall young wife bestowed upon him as he drew himself proudly erect, or was it akin to pity? At any rate, her gay young American head was inches above his own when she arose and suggested that they go inside and prepare for the housing of the guests who were to come over from the evening train.

"The drag has gone over to the station, Cecil, and it should be here by 7 o'clock."

"Confound his impudence, I'll show him," grumbled his lordship as he followed her, stiff legged, toward the door.

"What's up, Cecil, with your legs?" called his sister. "Are you getting old?" This suggestion always irritated him.

"Old? Silly question. You know how old I am. No; it's that beastly American horse. Evelyn, I told you they have no decent horses in this beastly country. They jiggle the life out of one—but he was obliged to unbend himself perceptibly in order to keep pace with her as she hurried through the door.

The Hon. Penelope allowed her indolent gaze to follow them. A perplexed pucker finally developed on her fair brow and her thought was almost expressed aloud: "By Jove, I wonder if she really loves him." Penelope was very pretty and very bright. She was visiting America for the first time, and she was learning rapidly. "Cecil's a good sort, you know, even"—but she was loyal enough to send her thoughts into other channels.

Nightfall brought half a dozen guests to Bazelhurst Villa. They were fashionable to the point where ennui is the chief characteristic, and they came probably because both eyes were swollen tight and his nose was bleeding. Penelope's face was beaming with excitement and interest.

"Who are you?" demanded his lordship, planting himself in front of the shivering twain.

"Tompkins," murmured the blind one feebly, tears starting from the blue slits and rolling down his cheeks.

"James, sir," answered the other, touching his damp forelock.

"Are they drunk?" asked Mrs. De Peyton, with fresh enthusiasm.

"No, they are not, poor fellows," cried Penelope. "They have taken nothing but water."

"By Jove! Deuced clever, that," drawled the duke. "Eh?" to the New Yorker.

"Deuced," from the Knickerbocker.

"Well, well! What's it all about?" demanded Bazelhurst.

"Mr. Shaw, sir," said James.

"Good Lord! Couldn't you rescue him?" in horror.

"He rescued us, sir," mumbled Tompkins.

"You mean"—

"He threw us in and then had to jump in and pull us out, sir. Beggin' your pardon, sir, but dash him!"

"And you didn't throw him in after all? By Jove! Extraordinary!"

"Do you mean to tell us that he threw you great bulking creatures into the river? Single handed?" cried Lady Bazelhurst, aghast.

"He did, Evelyn," inserted Penelope. "I met them coming home, and poor Tompkins was out of his senses. I don't know how it happened, but"— "It was this way, your ladyship," put in James, the groom. "Tompkins and me could see him from the point there, sir, a-fishin' below the log. So we says to each other 'Come on,' and up we went to where he was a-fishin'. Tompkins, bein' the game warden, says he to him, 'Hi, there!' He was plainly on our property, sir, a-fishin' from a boat for bass, sir. 'Hello, boys!' says he back to us. 'Get off our land,' says Tompkins. 'I am,' says he; 'it's water out here where I am.' Then"—

"You're wrong," broke in Tompkins. "He said 'it's wet out here where I am.'"

"You're right. It was wet. Then Tompkins called him a vile name, your lordship—shall I repeat it, sir?"

"No, no!" cried four feminine voices. "Yes, do," muttered the duke.

"He didn't wait after that, sir. He rowed to shore in a flash and landed on our land. 'What do you mean by that?' he said, madlike. 'My orders is to put you off this property,' says Tompkins, 'or to throw you in the river.' 'Who gave these orders?' asked Mr. Shaw. 'Lord Bazelhurst, sir, dash you!—beg pardon, sir; it slipped out. 'And who the devil is Lord Bazelhurst?' said he. 'Hurst,' said Tompkins. 'He owns this ground.

"She's dooced pretty, eh?" wailed the duke to Mrs. De Peyton taking his eyes from his young trywoman's face.

"Who?" asked Mrs. De. Then he relinquished his gaze turned his monocle blankly upon American beside him.

"I shall send him a warning; he'll have to respect, cad or no," said Bazelhurst, absently spitting upon his fingers instead of roll.

"Send him a warning?" asked queenly wife. "Aren't you going to see him personally? You can't leave the servants, it seems."

"My dear, I can't afford to let temper and engage in a row with a bounder, and there's no end of it might get into"—

"Thank you, my dear. Never fear, ladies and gentlemen. I shall attend to this person. He won't soon forget what I have to say to him," promised Lord Bazelhurst, mentally estimating the number of brandies and soda it would require in preparation.

"This afternoon?" asked his wife, with cruel insistence.

"Yes, Evelyn, if I can find him."

And so it was that shortly after 4 o'clock Lord Bazelhurst, unattended at his own request, rode forth like a Lochinvar, his steed headed bravely toward Shaw's domain, his back facing his own home with a military indifference that won applause from the assembled house party.

"I'll face him alone," he had said a trifle thickly for some unknown reason when the duke offered to accom- pany him. It also might have been noticed as he cantered down the drive that his legs did not stick out so stiffly, nor did his person bob so exactly as on previous but peaceful expeditions.

In fact, he seemed a bit limp. But his face was set determinedly for the border line and Shaw.

CHAPTER II.

In Which a Young Woman Trespasses.

MR. SHAW was a tall young man of thirty or thereabouts, smooth faced, good looking and athletic. It was quite true that he wore a red coat when tramping through his woods and vales, not because it was fashionable, but because he had a vague horror of being shot at by some nearsighted Nimrod from Manhattan. A crowd of old college friends had just left him alone in the hills after spending several weeks at his place, and his sole occupation these days, aside from directing the affairs about the house and grounds, lay in the efforts to commune with nature by means of a shotgun and a fishing rod. His most constant companion was a pipe, his most loyal follower a dog.

As he sauntered slowly down the river road that afternoon, smiling retro- spectively from time to time as he looked into the swift, narrow stream that had welcomed his adversaries of the morning, he little thought of the encounter in store for him. The little mountain stream was called a river by courtesy because it was yards wider than the brooks that struggled impo- tently to surpass it during the rainy season. But it was deep and turbu- lent in places, and it had a roar at times that commanded the respect of the foolhardy.

"The poor devils might have drown- ed, eh, Bonaparte?" he mused, ad- dressing the dog at his side. "Con- founded nuisance, getting wet after all, though. Lord Bazelhurst wants war, does he? That log down there is

"The poor devils might have drowned, eh, Bonaparte?" he mused, addressing the dog at his side. "Confounded nuisance, getting wet after all, though. Lord Bazelhurst wants war, does he? That log down there is the dividing line in our river, eh? And I have to stay on this side of it. By George, he's a mean spirited person, and it's his wife's land, too. I wonder what she's like. It's a pity a fellow can't have a quiet, decent summer up here in the hills. Still—lighting his pipe—"I dare say I can give as well as I take. If I stay off his land they'll have to keep off of mine. Hullo, who's that? A man, by George, but he looks like a partridge. As I live, Bonaparte is pointing. Ha, ha, that's one on you, Bony!" Mr. Shaw stepped into the brush at the side of the path and watched the movements of the man at the "log," now less than 100 yards away.

Lord Bazelhurst, attired in his brown corduroys and his tan waistcoat, certainly suggested the partridge as he hopped nimbly about in the distant foreground, cocking his ears from time to time with all the aloofness of that wily bird. He was, strange to relate, some little distance from Bazelhurst territory, an actual if not a confident trespasser upon Shaw's domain. His horse, however, was tethered to a sapling on the safe side of the log, comfortably browsing on Bazelhurst grass. Randolph Shaw, an unseen observer, was considerably mystified by the actions of his unusual visitor.

His lordship paced back and forth with a stride that grew firmer as time brought forth no hostile impediments. His monocle ever and anon was directed both high and low in search of Shaw or his henchmen, while his face was rapidly resolving itself into a bloom of rage.

"Confound him," his lordship was muttering, looking at his timepiece with stern disapproval, "he can't expect me to wait here all day. I'm on his land, and I'll stay here as long as I like!" (At this juncture he involuntarily measured the distance between himself and the log.) "I knew it was all a bluff, his threat to put me off. Hang it all, where is the fellow? I won't go up to his beastly house. I won't gratify him by going up there even to give him his orders. Demmed cad, blowhard! Five o'clock, confound him! I dare say he's seen me and has crawled off into the underbrush. He's afraid of me; he's a coward. It is as I feared. I can't see the rascal. There's only one thing left for me to do. I'll pin a note to this tree. Confound him, he shall hear from me. He'll have to read it."

A Boston Question.

A certain small boy in Boston is exceedingly fond of asking questions. Recently his mother said to him, "Robert, if you ask any more questions I shall be obliged to send you to bed at once."

"Oh, mamma! I've got to ask one," he exclaimed excitedly. "Let me ask just one, and then I won't ask any more tonight."

"Well, just one. What is it?"

SHEPHERD AND FLOCK.

Be sure that the flock is not exposed to storms. Exposure means a poor ewe, a light fleece and a weak lamb.

Keep the sheep quarters well littered with dry straw. Scatter land plaster over the pen to absorb the ammonia and keep the odors down.

Ewes that are successful breeders should be kept as long as possible.

Do not let the sheep drink from a trough half full of ice. Give water regularly and keep the trough clean.

If you want strong lambs give the ewes wheat bran in the grain ration.

If a lamb is chilled dip it in water as hot as you can bear your hand in and wrap it in a warm blanket until it is dry.

"A little farm, well tilled," should contain a few sheep well taken care of.

KEEP EWES HEALTHY.

Bowels Must Be Looked After Before Lambs Begin to Come.

This is a critical time of the year as regards the health and welfare of the ewes, which soon will be dropping their lambs and indeed have commenced to lamb in some parts of the country, says Dr. A. S. Alexander in the Farm Journal.

It must now be the aim of the shepherd to counteract the tendency to constipation, which is shown by every animal well along in pregnancy. Plenty of fresh water should be supplied and bran and oilmeal added to the other ration, for corn, if used, does not open the bowels, nor does it lead to a full flow of milk at lambing time. Salt should be used for pregnant ewes in small quantities and not in the shape of salted hay.

When the lambs commence to arrive the ewes may be brought into a comfortable, sheltered place where there are a number of small pens in which to put each ewe in turn as soon as she drops her lambs. On taking her into the small pen she should be turned up and the locks of wool removed from her udder, so that the lambs will be able to suck without getting wool into their mouths. This done, the ewe may be left for awhile to lick her lambs dry, and when this has been done they should be assisted to stand and take their first drink, if weak, after which they will usually get along all right.

WINTERING THE HORSE.

Idle Animals Need Exercise and a Fair Amount of Feed.

The horse in winter should not be stall tied all day, but should have plenty of exercise. Turned into the well fenced paddock, the horse's exercise will take care of itself. He should be fed and watered at regular times. The feed need not be large. It is worse to founder a horse than to underfeed him. Oats, corn and hay, an occasional bran mash and the horse should winter in excellent shape. The currying should not be forgotten. The proverb says that it is worth good oats to curry. When hitched in the cold they should be blanketed. Horses are susceptible to colds and pneumonia and veterinarian's bills, but they may all be prevented if the proper precautions are taken.

If one has work for his horses in winter, so much the better. The most common mistake is underfeeding them at this season and a consequent resumption of hard work in spring in ill conditions. It does not pay to have dull tools nor inefficient horses. One cannot afford to put up with either. Just exercise a little horse sense in feeding and caring for the horses this winter and see if it does not pay both in efficiency of the horses and satisfaction of the owner.

Relief For Itching Pigs.

Itchiness of the skin of pigs may be due to dirty bedding, to irritating objects in the bedding, to lice or to mange or eczema. On general principles spray and scrub the pigs with a 1-100 solution of coal tar dip and rub in sulphur on the worst spots while the skin is damp. Provide clean bedding. Let the pigs run out daily. Physic each pig and then give medicine for worms. A suitable treatment is to mix one dram of copperas in the slop for five consecutive days for each 100 pounds of body weight of pigs. Repeat the application of coal tar dip solution as often as found necessary.

Live Stock Profitable.

Live stock raising in connection with general farming conserves fertility elements and makes it possible to produce more food on a given area of land. Growing crops and breeding animals should be practiced on every farm of any considerable size if possible, as this kind of farming is surer as a general plan and it saves the farm for future crops.

This Farmer Shows How Good Roads Benefit

MR. J. J. HOUSTON, who lives on a road that has lately been improved, in Lauderdale County Mississippi, makes the common-sense statement which follows:

"I have never made an investment for which I have gotten as much financial returns and satisfaction out of as I have out of this road. The advancement in property alone has been sufficient to four or five times pay the whole cost of construction, and I don't think the county could make any investment that would bring in as much returns as to build a network of them all over it. It is such a good thing that I want every man in the county to have one just like it, and I am willing to pay my part of the taxes to help him get it."

Build Concrete Roads

Then your road taxes will be invested and not merely spent. They will return many times the amount they cost, and those returns will show in the increased valuation of your property, the lessened cost of marketing your produce, the longer life of your horses and vehicles, the greater conveniences and general prosperity of your community.

Concrete roads outlast all other kinds of roads and require practically no repairs for many years. They are safe, clean, permanent and passable every day in the year.

duce more food on a given area of land. Growing crops and breeding animals should be practiced on every farm of any considerable size if possible, as this kind of farming is surer as a general plan and it saves the farm for future crops.

The Ailing Cow.

Empty stomachs will make "hollow horn." If a cow's coat loses its gloss and is rough and staring give her from one-half to one pound of epsom salts, a cupful of molasses and a tablespoonful of ginger dissolved in a quart of water. Keep her warm and increase her feed, adding roots and linseed meal.

Tonic For Horses.

A handful of linseed meal fed to the horses about three times a week will aid to regulate the system, promote health and a glossy coat.

Tying the Herd Bull.

There are various ways of tying the herd bull. It is not an uncommon practice to keep him in a stanchion, and some tie him to a low manger with one rope around the horns and another tied to the ring in his nose. We have always felt that it is a better practice to keep the herd bull in a box stall open at the sides, arranged so he can see the herd. This makes him feel that he is part of the herd. A stall of this character gives the bull an opportunity to move about, which we believe is to his advantage.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Ringworm In Calves.

Ringworm is very common in calves at this time of the year. Scrub and scrape the spot perfectly free from scales and scabs and then rub in some iodine ointment. Repeat the application each other day and the trouble will soon subside. Isolate the calf, as the disease is contagious. Clean up, disinfect, whitewash, perfectly ventilate and sunlight the stable, as ringworm is due to a vegetable parasite (Trichophyton tonsurans) which lives on damp walls and woodwork in insanitary stables as well as on animals.

Spoiling Calves' Udders.

A common bad result of sucking among calves is spoiling of udders later on from garget and similar troubles, says Dr. A. S. Alexander. Milk fed calves confined to a pen often learn the vicious habit of sucking one another's udders. Where this takes place it almost invariably happens that the udder will in time secrete milk, and such milk sours, clots and leads to garget (inflammation of the udder or mammitis or mastitis). This will be news to many a man who has not been a close observer, but we know it to be a fact.

Cholera a Filth Disease.

If it were not for hog cholera pork raisers would be living in the lap of luxury. The time will come when there will be no more excuse for hog cholera than for the human cholera, that until a century or so ago periodically devastated Europe and America. Both are essentially filth diseases.

Warm the Frosty Bits.

These are the days when the humane driver always warms the bridle before he harnesses his horse. A little warm water should always be poured over the bit before it is placed in the horse's mouth.

A fleshy udder, fine to t when empty and retaining the and form after milking, indicat tendency to inflammatory trou The skin should be clean and free from the ribs and with a color; hair fine, thick and short; perament active and docile; l feeder.

The main points in selecting dairy cows are the large, well bala udders, that are not fleshy; the l roomy bodies, showing in the first an ample laboratory for the form of milk and in the latter case a ca ty for taking care of large amount feed.

Such are not always profitable c but they usually are. Cows are dom profitable that give less than pounds of butter in twelve months

Age of Cattle.

The calf when born has two pai incisors; the other two pairs ap during the first month, says Prof G. E. Morton of the Colorado ex ment station. When a calf is eight months old it loses the middle pa milk incisors and grows a perma pair. The next pair, one on each is replaced at twenty-seven month age, the third pair at thirty months of age, the fourth or out pair at forty-five months. The tim appearance of these incisors v within rather narrow limits, so we are able to tell the age of y cattle fairly accurately. The calf has a temporary set of molars w are later replaced with perma ones, but they are not considere estimating the age of the animal.

WORK CHEERFULLY.

Then Even Wash Day Will Lose Its Terrors For You.

If we take an interested mind and a brave heart with us to work there is nothing about the household round that should worry or dismay us. The stairs that are so much grumbled at give a much needed series of strengthening movements, for as we journey up and down so many times a day the hip muscles are exercised and the calf and thigh muscles made strong and trustworthy. Bedmaking and turning mattresses will improve the housewife's figure, exercising the muscles of the abdomen as well as those of the arms and shoulders. These are movements specially helpful to the woman afraid of growing uncomfortably and unbecomingly stout.

The homely washtub is not to be despised. Washing is real good exercise and enjoyable, too, but if you mean to aim for health and beauty be very sure that your washing bench and your ironing board are at exactly the right height. They must be high enough to insure that the greatest muscular exertion is brought to bear upon the shoulders and upper part of the back rather than across the small of the back.

Turning the wringer will give yet another exercise, and if a machine of good make is chosen mangling clothes should not be too heavy a task for the normally healthy woman. It should, indeed, be beneficial in strengthening the muscles of the forearm.

Standing all day long at an ironing table would in time make crooked the straightest young back, but here again we are to use a sane moderation. Finish off a reasonable number of garments each week rather than plunge into a "big wash" every fortnight, toiling and molling over ironing till more than half the week is gone. Never attempt too much, and if your back begins to feel weary do not scorn to sit down at your ironing board while you press some of the smaller things, such as handkerchiefs or lace bows.

Even cooking may be found to be a useful exercise. Stooping to look in the oven, reaching down a plate from a shelf, carrying things to and from the pantry, manipulating the rolling pin and potato masher, turning the meat or vegetable chopper, beating eggs, stooping to take things out of the refrigerator and the many other movements required all have a value in developing the muscles.

GREENAWAY STYLES.

They Are Revived In Charming Designs For Little Ones.

The charming designs known as Kate Greenaway fashions are coming into vogue again. For little boys the suit illustrated here is both attractive and modish. The small trousers are of dark blue linen, and these are buttoned to his blouse of white silk. The note of blue is repeated in the collar, tie and cuffs.

Coats for the children are all important at the present moment. Many mothers are desirous of choosing a fabric that will be useful right through the coming months, one that will be warm enough for the treacherous winds that blow in March, and yet a material that will not be too heavy to wear during the following months.

Covert coating in one of the pleasing tan brown shades is ideal for a coat that is to be worn during this period. It can be made waterproof and so is impervious to the spring rains. Many women prefer its smooth surface to the more woolly fabrics that have lately been in evidence, and there are few children that fail to look neat and trim in coats made of this useful material.

Mrs. ANNIE A. CORBETT

AVON, ONT., May 14th, 1913

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with "Fruit-a-tives" and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives" I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot". He Had a Girl.

A small town boasts a female preacher. One day when working in her study she hear a timid knock at the door. Answering the summons she found a bashful young German on the step, who stood twirling his straw hat in his hands.

"Good afternoon," the preacheress remarked. "What do you wish?"

"Dey say der minister lifed in dis house, hey?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yess? Vell, I vant me to kit merriet."

"All right. I can marry you," she said.

The lady's hair is beginning to silver and the German glanced at it. Then without comment he jammed his hat on his head and hurried down the walk.

"Will you be back?" she called after him.

"You gits no chance mit me," he answered. "I don't want you. I haf got me a girl already."—Fun.

Up to Them.

Young Raymond had been busy all of the afternoon with his little pail and shovel on the beach. Bedtime came, and wearily he stood while his mother undressed him. Then prayers were next in order, and by that time he was almost in the land of nod.

"Now, be a good boy, dear, and say your prayers. Thank God for all his goodness to you." His head had fallen on her shoulder. "Raymond," she said sternly as she shook him, "you cannot go to bed until you have thanked God for his blessings, for giving you a nice, comfortable home and a lovely beach to play on and a mother to love you. Think of the number of little boys to- night who are hungry and without a home and no nice clothes to wear, and"—

Here Raymond's interest became roused sufficiently to protest sleepily: "Mother, I think them's th' fellers that ort to do th' prayin'!"—Picked Up.

Ballad of Simple Susan.

Simple Susan went a-fishing
For to catch a whale,
Wore a costly Paris bonnet
And a spangled veil.

Wore a pair of high heeled slippers
And her silken hose—
Others things wore Simple Susan,
As you may suppose.

Wore her newest, tightest pattern
Tube skirt with a slit.
As a dress display fair Susan Certainly was "it."

Susan wore her hair in frizzes
And made up her face;
Then she motored off a-fishing
With a languid grace.

Susan didn't take a rod or Reel or creel or hooks,
And for bait she just depended
On her bonny looks.

Simple Susan went a-fishing.
Luck? Well, pretty fair;
Went a-fishin' in the city—
Caught a millionaire!

Bacon should be cooked in a deep iron pan which is large enough to take a rasher—not in an open frying pan. If it is cooked in an open pan it will splutter over the stove and waste the fat.

Don't try to cook it too fast. It should be cooked over a moderate heat only. Turn it with a skewer and not with a fork. Serve it on a very hot dish.

The mistake that most people make when cooking the bacon is that they put it on the fire and leave it alone, so it gets burnt in one part while it is underdone in another. You must attend to it constantly, turning it at least two or three times during the process of cooking.

LAMP AND CANDLE SHADES.

They Are Trimmed With Delicately Shaded Bead Fringes.

The smart shades for lamps and candles are made of silk and trimmed with beads. The beads are formed into a band to edge the shade, top and bottom a heavy bead fringe is used, and some ornament formed of beads decorates the sides of the shade, which is itself made of gathered silk.

One especially good shade recently shown by a famous dealer in lamps, topped a lamp of dull blue porcelain mounted in dull brass.

The shade was made of old gold silk gathered neatly over a circular frame. A wide band of beads, embroidered in an irregular design, was fastened around the top and bottom of the shade. It was made up of beads in various tints of blue—brilliant, sealike blue predominated. The blue was lightened by beads of almost a greenish yellow tint and some of oyster white.

A fringe in which blue predominated hung from the bottom of the shade—a fringe about the width of the band at the top and bottom and about an eighth the height of the shade.

There were four big butterflies formed of beads—still in shades of blue—sewed on canvas. These were fastened at regular intervals around the shade. The tips of the lower wings touched the lower band of beadwork, and the long antennae almost reached the upper band of beads.

The Man Who Nudges You.

Of bores there are plenty. I needn't detail.
The various kinds that I know,
Like the barber who tells you your hair's falling out
Or the people who talk at the show,
Or the man in the street car who sprawls on the seat
And steadfastly refuses to budge,
But the worst of the lot—and my goat he has got—
Is the fellow who gives you a nudge.

He will tell you a story, an old one perhaps,
And regale you with riddles and squibs,
And ere you're aware of his purpose blaz- zare
You get the point—right in the ribs.
You meet him again. "Here's a good one," he says;
Tells a joke culled from Puck or from Judge;
Then his ramrod forefinger has sought out its mark,
The fellow who gives you a nudge.

At the theater, too, if he sits next to you,
He will laugh, he will chuckle and shout.
The comedian's jest leaves you gasping for breath

When a sharp pointed elbow shoots out.
He may have good qualities, mean well and all that,
Be a churchgoer, work like a drudge
Or be kind to his wife, but the bane of my life
Is the fellow who gives you a nudge.

A BETTER REMEDY THAN NASTY SALTS.

Few people like to take physic, especially salts, because they are so disagreeable to take and because of the griping and pains they cause. Rexall Orderlies enable you to take less physic, and all without griping, purging or excessive looseness. Salts and harsh physics usually give only temporary relief and often leave the bowels worse off than before.

Rexall Orderlies move the bowels promptly, and soothe, tone and strengthen the intestinal muscles, leaving them healthy and regular in action. They taste like candy, and the movement they cause is as easy and natural as though your bowels were in perfect health and you never had to take physic at all. We have so much faith in Rexall Orderlies that we urge you to try them with the understanding that, if they do not satisfy you in every way, all you have to do to get your money back is to tell us. We honestly believe them to be the best bowel remedy made. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c, 25c, 50c.
